

Human resource development and the provision of opportunities

A metropolis with abundant human resources to support its growth

Nurturing high level and globally competitive human resources

World-class human resources will be nurtured at prefectural senior high schools, and university-industry cooperation, including internships and joint research, will be promoted in order to develop globally competitive human resources.

Encouraging the invitation of highly specialized human resources from overseas

Efforts will be made to make Osaka an attractive place for laborers and students from overseas by relaxing resident status regulations etc., and establishing a more attractive environment for overseas professionals.

Strengthening the development of human resources that support growth

English education at elementary and junior/senior high schools will be improved, students will be helped to acquire basic scholastic ability, and support for private school students will be enhanced to expand the range of school options.

Building a labor market that can make the most of the strengths of the local communities

Support will be provided for the welfare of residence in an integrated manner by transferring the function of job placement offices from the national government to the local level, while also building a labor market that can make the most of the current situation and strengths of the local communities.

Strengthening social welfare programs and providing opportunities that support growth

Efforts will be made to help motivate the youth, young parents, women, the elderly and people with disabilities by nurturing an environment where they can demonstrate their ability. Efforts will be made to help them become self sustained through employment support and the strengthening of social welfare programs to ensure social security.
