It is important to foster skills that are necessary to express opinions in foreign languages without hesitation, and to interact and get along with others in various places both domestically and internationally, in order to proactively collaborate with people of different languages and cultures.

To let students acquire the skills mentioned, I would like to introduce debate activities in my class. My lesson includes the following three steps:

First, I let students learn how to state opinions logically. Students will learn that logical opinions will be followed by objective reasons.

As a second step, I let students listen and grasp the main points of others' opinions. In pairs, students can practice listening and taking notes of their partner's opinion.

Lastly, I let students try to make rebuttal speech. They will listen to an opinion and make a logical rebuttal speech. I will tell them that their subjective preference will not matter.
