- 1        Saki: Hi, Mark. Please look at this picture. My friend took it at the party yesterday.
Mark: This is nice, Saki. Who is the person next to you in the picture?
- 2        Aki: Peter! I have a good idea! I want to write the idea before I forget it.
Peter: Oh, good, Aki. You can use this to write your idea. Here you are.
Aki: Thank you.
Peter: Do you need paper, too?
Aki: No, thank you. I have my notebook.
- 3        Now, let's move on to the next topic. There are many things to enjoy in Osaka. Let's see what people visiting Osaka want to enjoy the most. We interviewed 100 people at Osaka Station. 25 people enjoy an amusement park. 16 people enjoy nice food. People enjoy various other things, too.
- 4        Taro: Hi, Julia. I got information about club activities from our teacher. You want to join one of them, right?
Julia: Yes, that's right, Taro. On Friday, I help my host family cook dinner, so I want to go home without joining a club activity.
Taro: OK. You were a member of a tennis club in Canada, right? How about the tennis club? The club doesn't have its activities on Friday.
Julia: Well, I want to try something different in Japan. How about the volleyball club?
Taro: The club has its activities on Wednesday and on Friday, and no activities on the other days.
Julia: I see. How about the brass band club? I like music.
Taro: The brass band club has its activities from Tuesday to Thursday.
Julia: That's perfect! I will join it!

5 Hello, I'm Tomoki. Last weekend, I saw my grandmother. Today, I'll tell you a story I heard from her. When she was young, people didn't have mobile phones. One day, she waited for her friends at a station for a long time, but they didn't come. At that time, many stations had message boards and people used them in such a situation. Before going home, she left a message on a message board in the station and let her friends know that she waited at the station but went home. She and her friends couldn't meet on that day. Meeting someone in public places sometimes wasn't easy in the past. My grandmother says, now, it is easier. She and I planned to meet at a station. However, I had trouble with my bicycle after I left home. I sent a message with my mobile phone to tell my grandmother that I would get to the station very late. When she received my message, she was at the station. She called me on her mobile phone and told me that she would leave the station and wait for me at a nearby cafe. We met there. It is interesting to know that situations now and situations in the past are very different.

Question 1: Why did Tomoki's grandmother use a message board?

Question 2: Where did Tomoki and his grandmother meet?

- 6
- Andy: How was your dance lesson last Saturday, Emi?
- Emi: I didn't have a lesson, Andy. Instead, I joined an activity held in my town on that day. It was great!
- Andy: Oh, what kind of activity was it?
- Emi: People who joined the activity enjoyed picking up trash in the town while they were jogging.
- Andy: That sounds interesting. I have picked up trash on the beach as a volunteer. Also, I often jog in the park. But I have never tried to do those two things together.
- Emi: It was my first experience, too. The activity was started in Europe in 2016. The experiences of people who joined the activity were shared online and the activity spread to the world. During the activity, I also reported how much trash I collected and people around the world gave nice messages to my report. Sharing my experience with people around the world was also fun.
- Andy: That sounds nice. People can encourage each other by sharing their experiences. Also, joining the activity sounds good as exercise, too. If people pick up trash while they are jogging, they seem to need more energy than the energy needed for just jogging.
- Emi: You are right! I ran, stopped and picked up trash on the ground, and started to run again. Repeating these movements was so hard, but it was good exercise!
- Andy: I see. So, the activity was good for not only your town but also your body. Well, when I go jogging next time, I will pick up trash.
- Emi: That's good!

Question 1: Which is the thing Emi did not do last Saturday?

Question 2: What is the thing Andy said?
